#SAY Her NAME

"I think the misinterpretation of the society that we're living in, especially in the USA is that this is a black problem. It isn't. This is a world problem. I mean, and one of the main issues is every time something goes wrong with the black community, it's our problem. That shouldn't be that way. I think this is a world problem. These are issues that affect a certain population, but I definitely think that everyone should be affected. But I think that it's getting twisted to say 'Hey, this is a black problem you guys, how are you going to solve it?' I think that's a bad way to look at it and I think we, all of us have to be involved in the solutions and we all have to be comfortable being uncomfortable." JAMES WADE

"I wanted to play and use this as an opportunity for us to all get together, especially our team individually and do something great for social justice and equality." ALLIE QUIGLEY

"There's so many things going on in the world that if you haven't had a shift in perspective just in 2020 alone, it's like you're not really paying attention." DIAMOND DESHIELDS

"These need to be shown, but they need to go beyond just awareness. It needs to go beyond the formatives and us as a team we all wanted something that felt personal and we're taking action." GABBY WILLIAMS

"We're all doing our part and doing what we can to make a difference." STEFANIE DOLSON

"WHAT PEOPLE NEED TO UNDERSTAND IS IT HAS BEEN 134 DAYS SINCE BREONNA TAYLOR WAS KILLED IN HER SLEEP.
OK, 134 days. It's been 57 days or 58 days since the Attorney General of Kentucky, Daniel Cameron, made a statement and said that they were going to wait for Louisville Metro Police Department to do an investigation. Now imagine if I or someone close to me were to take the life of someone, and then they say, 'OK, we're going to let you investigate it, and we're going to wait on you to investigate it.' That's not political. That's just justice and that's what we're looking for." JAMES WADE
